Our Red Brothers.

Miss Bailey's "Historical Sketches" have given the white man's report of the tribes who lived where the Shawshin and the Spigot join waters, whose fishing grounds and war path lay along the "Monomack" from the tide below Haverhill with its leaping sturgeon to the mountain lakes and trout brooks beyond Concord. After poring in childhood over Hubbard's 1877 edition of "Indian Wars," and listening at bed time to the hair lifting tales of Indian vengeance that came back with visiting cousins from Concord, Connecticut, and the "Eastward" to my forbears I still kept within my soul a feeling that the trouble was all our fault. My acquaintance with the Chippewas of the north-west, who displayed under Tecumseh some of the fine traits of our own New England brethren, but who seem to have taken to the Methodist idea of God more kindly than did our infidels of the Massachusetts in contact with a stern creed—has led me to read our early father's history of the Indian's conversion and subsequent extermination with reservations of opinion. Careful and patient labor like Eliot's and Gookin's brought out what seems like the rare bloom of stray apple trees run wild in our later growth of forest. The fruit is bitter and hard like the result of all those early grafts into that stubborn, proud, western Mongolian heart. The plague, either a putrid fever like diphtheria, or else smallpox, had reduced, with civil wars, the tribes around Boston who were under a great Penobscot baskah—the Massachusetts of the Blue Hills especially, from 30,000 to 300 warriors and we gained 30 years between 1640 and 1676 to get well rooted and trained by these Fridays who served as guides and servants to the forlorn and starving immigrants until they learned how to raise corn, beans and pumpkins, and to fight Indians usually in armor and within a garison house, through knot-holes, with the valiant marauders, naked and exposed to full view in all their maneuvers. These children of the forest liked our coats, our goodies and pastries, (do you suppose they knew anything about clam bakes or bean pots?)—they revelled in the new arms of the pale face and when, like our own Roger on his four acres with his two squaws and dogs and visitors, or like the treacherous Numpow who had the praying Indians under his wing at Wameet (that early Hood farm of 2500 acres) they got into trouble either from debts that called for their best tilled reservations to cancel, or quarrels that compelled flight and a return to burned wigwams and confiscated lands—still they hung around asking for supplies in the winter, idle and ready for liquor and the intrigue of Indian politics which was as complicated and exciting as the Eastern question of to-day. Many of them lacked the true spirit and, like the modern Canadian under British rule, preferred a soft life on a reservation to all the joys of conquering freedom with Philip. Miss Bailey's notice is brief of one of the noblest characters among those of the best blood, "Esteemed a witch by the Puritans and a false fellow by his countrymen."

We can understand how the leading sachems felt as the power slipped away with their lands, how the tribute failed (the best corn lands gone). When the grabbing English of which we once formed a corporate body get the Orinoco, the Nicaragua Canal, the seal fisheries of Alaska, the coal station of Hawaii, the mackerel of Newfoundland and all the bait of the Atlantic seaboard, with all our carrying trade across the Atlantic and Pacific, all our markets of South America, all our railroad business in the States, all our mines in the northwest and on the Yukon, THEN we will know how Philip and Massasoit felt. We know what they did or tried to do. A fellow who could run 100 miles on a summer day with an errand and back at the same pace on the next; who had to be exterminated or banished such was his pluck; who never forgot a kindness or forgave an injury; who, when converted to the Puritan practice of worship, asked theological conundrums that would elude completely dumb; a man that the English thought worthy to be quartered; whose head hung bleaching for 20 years before parson Mather's eyes, sold for 30 pieces of silver,—such sort of men were no camp followers for crumb. When the covetousness and neglect and ingratitude of our officials and the treachery and jealousy of adventurers outside the law-givers reach, at last, roused the devil of vengeance in the poor red man's breast, there was no doubt of the issue. Read both sides for yourselves. Hubbard's book bristles with epithets and praises to God for the slaughter of these "Savage miscreants with some kind of a religion learned of the Prince of Darkness."

When a chief resisted the Puritan soldier successfully he was an "enthusiastical or diabolical miscreant" allowed by Providence for some wise purpose to triumph over Zion. "Subtlety, guile and falsehood natural to all these Indians," "Whatever hopes may be of their conversion in after time, there is but little truth in their hearts at present." Philip's war gives a tale of horrors which forever blackens the early colonist as a soldier or a Christian. Moseley, that old privateer from Jamaica, did valiant things, but somehow you finish Drake's tales of that war with a respect for Philip the heathen, and a feeling that for men like Moseley it was only the tiger hunts of India set before his fellow soldier of modern times, only game for him; and the Indian being well matched gave him the greater renown. Eyes, ears, legs, and nerve were well developed in our early father by the time the colony had entered on its 50th anniversary and the red "fiend" had spent his last ball on our borders. Starvation which threatened the white man in 1637 now allied with him against his red friend.

The Pequods in 1636 found the Narragansetts preferred to take the English ally to help wreck a terrible vengeance on their inveterate enemies and when Philip tried to enlist the wavering tribes in 1675, to rescue their hunting grounds from the invader he met the same complication of interests. The saying of a prayer gave them rations, clothes, everything they could no longer obtain for themselves. What could he do with men who were practically tramps and paupers? (What are we going to do with such?) There was a place however where the big dance was annually kept up, where all met under the great sachem of the Merrimac for miles around to tell the tales of the past and preserve this knowledge for those to come,—sort of a yearly celebration like our coming anniversary. Passaconaway of the Agawams, baskah since the death of the Penobscot chief, from Pennacook (Concord) to Saugus (Lynn), over the Nipmucks of Nashua and Wachusett to the great Island in Portsmouth Harbor, now Newcastle; allied with Squando of Saco on the east, Cutahemache of the Dorchester and probably before the whites came in to cut them off, old Massasoit of the Wampanoags. His kin lay all along the river to the White Mountains and Canada where he could always retreat when policy advised it. Naamkeke, the haven of consolation, a name given to Salem town, once probably the seat of the king, was, maybe, a movable team following the chief. Anyway Naamkeke was over the river somewhere in Haverhill borders, possibly at Bodwell's or near the Pawtucket falls later on in 1660 above Lowell (usually at the fishing grounds near a river confluence.)

To Mayor Dennison "proper and valiant soldier" Miss Bailey attributes our comparative immunity in the Indian raids on account of his vigorous cooperation with the local officials. Hubbard says Moseley was sent up the Merrimac with 100 men as far as Concord early in 1675, but could find no Indians on any of their usual plantations, they "having withdrawn from their native place that they might not meddle in the present quarrel." To the volatile Nashua tribes and the "Eastward" tramps must be attributed the raids that kept Andover on tiptoe from 1676 to 1725. The raid of 1676 is a story by itself that had a local origin and will come in with the town history later on. This case between "bad white" and "bad Indian" had anything to do with our Merrimac heathen neighbors neither was our own record nothing but a fair one as a SETTLEMENT and we reaped the benefit of our own wise treatment of our allies. Old Cutshemache of Dorchester, whose cabin was Eliot's headquarters, may have been a "tool" for the transfer of Roger's land, but he was interpreter and general go-between and seemed to be trusted by both sides. When the allies came to Roxbury in the Pequot scare, he was the one to announce their arrival, as secured in with the red to big dinner by 20 musketeers and signs the white man's league with the red, never to harbor a Pequot and neither to stop fighting them till the other consents, to return fugitive servants, (no contrabands) uphold free trade, furnish guides. But how they kept their promise and what came of this infamous war of extermination must be reserved for another story.

TRIFLING SUBJECT

Gave England Opportunity to Start Venezuelan Row.

It Has No Resemblance to the Curious Affair—Question as to Jurisdiction Over Yuruan the Main Point at Issue.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Some of the latest reports from London cause comment and criticism among diplomatic circles here. One of these statements attributes to Ambassador Bayard the declaration that the Yuruan incident is independent of the boundary question, and that the United States can take no part in the former incident. It is pointed out here that the two questions are inseparably connected. The Yuruan incident is based on a claim that the Venezuelans arrested Sergeant Bohrer of the British consular party on British soil, and that this indignity must be repaired. The Venezuelans claim that it occurred on Venezuelan soil.

The gravity of the case depends on ownership of the territory where the trouble took place. It is, therefore, considered to involve the entire territorial question, although it is a specific incident arising in the disputed territory.

In Venezuela the answer to the first demand for reparation on this incident, Minister Rojas said that the reparation was refused, because it would be a surrender of all the claims Venezuela ever had made.

As it becomes more and more evident that the British government is disposed to make it appear that the Yuruan incident is parallel to the Corinto affair, and may, therefore, be treated in the same fashion without leading to the intervention of the United States, officials here are pointing out essential points of difference in the two incidents, and Mr. Bayard will doubtless be instructed to emphasize these in his further representations on the subject to the British foreign office.

In the first case Great Britain demanded and obtained an indemnity from Nicaragua on the ground that her national honor had been outraged by the summary expulsion of her representative, although the latter was only a humble consular agent. The United States consented to stand aloof on this occasion on the theory that a nation has a right to remove an insult.

But in the Yuruan affair it cannot be maintained for an instant that the British government has a right to demand redress for the arrest of its officials, unless it shall be first established that they were within British territory, and thus the whole issue is raised as a preliminary.

If these British officers were in British territory, then Venezuela must apologize and make any other reasonable reparation, but before she can rightfully be expected to do this, that fact must be shown, and nothing but an agreement, amicable or enforced, upon the exact location of the boundary line can settle this point.

Therefore, the attempt to shift the issue, involving as it does a judgment of the rights of Great Britain to territory claimed by Venezuela, is not likely to secure the countenance of our state department.

Beer Drinkers May Spread Disease.

PORTLAND, Me., Oct. 21.—Jennie Bornstein was arrested yesterday for violating a quarantine placed on her house by the board of health on account of diphtheria. The woman kept a kitchen barroom, and hundreds of men have visited the infected house during the past few days. The police are placing in quarantine the houses of Mrs. Bornstein's customers as far as they can be found.

Daughter's Testimony Against Him.

WOODVILLE, N. H., Oct. 21.—Milo Gray, who was arrested at Westmoreland, charged with the murder of his wife at Landfall in 1901, was arraigned here yesterday. He pleaded not guilty, and the hearing was adjourned until Oct. 25. Gray insists that his wife is alive, but the authorities claim that his 17-year-old daughter is a strong witness against him.

Brown Gets Seven Years.

BOSTON, Oct. 21.—Dr. Jacob W. Brown was sentenced to seven years in state prison yesterday. Brown was convicted on a charge of criminal malpractice in performing an operation on Miss L. Farrell in the South End, Aug. 3, from the effect of which, and cholera taken in consequence, she died.

His Farewell Sermon.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Dr. Talmage preached his farewell sermon in this city last night, before leaving to take up his work in the new pastorate in Washington. It was at the Madison Avenue Presbyterian church that this sermon was delivered. The subject was "Testimony for Christ."

A Generous Proposition.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Oct. 21.—Sebastian D. Lawrence yesterday notified Mayor Johnson that he desired to make a gift of a soldier's monument to the city. The city government last night voted to accept the offer. The monument will be 50 feet high and will cost $80,000.

Not Enough Proof to Convict.

WILLIAMSTON, Conn., Oct. 21.—Storjowski of East Thompson, the Pole who has been in jail since January, suspected of the murder of his wife and stepson, was released yesterday by order of State Attorney Hunter for lack of proof to convict.

Treatment Didn't Cure Him.

BOSTON, Oct. 21.—Vincent J. Rogers, aged 68, was found in an unconscious condition on Green street yesterday and died in a few minutes. He had just been treated at a hospital for cancer, and was on his way home.

Official Speed Record.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—The record of the speed made by the battleship Indiana on her trial trip last Friday, as reported to Secretary Herbert, shows the corrected speed of the vessel to have been 15.0574 knots an hour.

GOLD EATING WATER

SPARKLING LIQUID CHARGED WITH CYANIDE OF POTASSIUM.

Millions in the Yellow Metal Recovered by Percolation—A Simple but Interesting Process, With Results Whist Are Nothing Less Than Marvelous.

It is not generally known, even in California, that millions of dollars in glittering gold are annually taken from rude heaps of base looking quartz by the gentle flowing of crystal water over large piles of broken rocks that contain the precious metal, but such is the fact.

"The process of robbing the earth of its gold has now been reduced to such a fine point," said Professor Price, "that the gentle flowing of water over the ore cleans it of its golden treasures, and this works well in cases where the old chloride and other methods are not so useful."

But the water of which Professor Price spoke is not so pure as it looks, though the eye could never distinguish it from that which is dipped by the old oaken bucket from a well in the deep tangled wilderness. The water used by miners in bringing gold from piles of mineral bearing quartz is charged with a simple chemical which has the potency to dissolve gold and hold it in solution. In truth, the "sparkling liquid" which flows over hundreds of tons of quartz, trickles through the mines and seeks its level, laden with gold, is charged with a deadly poison, cyanide of potassium, a drug which ferrets out the minutest particles of the yellow metal, dissolves them and brings the precious burden to the vat for conversion into refined gold again.

The cyanide process is as noiseless and unerring as the laws of gravitation, doing its work as quietly as "the majesty of the dance of the hours," unhindered by darkness or weather, by disasters of field or flood.

The state mining bureau of California was one of the first in the United States to investigate the merits of the cyanide process, and since the earliest investigations the method has found extensive application. It is so interesting that its results are nothing less than marvelous. This method of extracting both gold and silver from ores is based on the fact that even a very weak solution of cyanide of potassium dissolves gold and silver, forming respectively "auro-potassic cyanide" and "argento-potassic cyanide," in the language of the chemists.

This interesting process consists of treating the ore with a weak solution of potassium cyanide, usually by allowing the solution to percolate through the ore, or by agitating a mixture of the ore and solution. When this part of the operation is completed, the solution is separated from the solid material, and the gold and silver are precipitated in a metallic form. The process is modern in its application, though it has long been known that cyanide of potassium would "eat gold." During the last five years, however, the process has been introduced into almost every goldfield in California and elsewhere, and more than $30,000,000 have been recovered by the gentle flowing of waters charged with the magical chemical over heaps of ore. Aside from the thoroughness of the percolating water method, its economy is a marked feature in mining. It is in great favor with the gold mining companies of New Zealand and at Johannesburg, Africa, as well as in California.

One of the most advantageous features of the cyanide method is that it can be applied to many gold and silver ores generally called "refractory" or "refractory." The rebellious ore is placed in a vat for percolation, and the solution is run preferably from the bottom by a pipe, rising slowly through the ore. The solution containing gold is carried through precipitating appliances into the final reservoir, where, robbed of its wealth of metal, it may be repumped into ore vats and again used for searching out the coveted metal.

One of the curious things about the solution is that a total percentage not stronger than an eighth of 1 per cent will carry away the gold almost as well as fluid of greater strength.

Precipitation is effected by the use of fine pieces of zinc, so arranged that when the rich waters flow over them the fine gold clusters in rich deposits over the zinc, for which it has an affinity. The gold which thus deserts the waters of cyanide deposits itself in the form of fine dust on the plates of zinc. The percentage of gold extracted by this process is very large. A large parcel of fine sulphurates from the Utah mines yielded an average of 93.18 per cent of the gold value under the cyanide treatment, and similar results have been experienced elsewhere in the state. The cyanide plants are being extended, and the noiseless process is everywhere becoming popular. —San Francisco Chronicle.

The Wet Disk.

It is evident by many straws noticed in a general reading of periodical and newspaper literature that the next fad of the dietists is to be nuts. All the scientific cooking and health food authorities are urging with increasing persistence the value of this natural food and giving receipts for various nut flours, from which different varieties of bread cake may be made that are nutritious and of medicinal value in certain ailments. And now we learn that "Miss Ellen S. Atkins, a talented London woman who lost a splendid contralto voice four years ago from an attack of grip, has completely recovered her vocal powers through persisting in a fruit and nut diet for a year and a half." —New York Times.

Dry.

In a volume of sections by a well known but turgid preacher the following lines were found written upon the wall:

"If there could be another flood, I'd refuse to live."

Though all the world should be submerged, I'd refuse to live.

Though all the world should be submerged, I'd refuse to live.

Though all the world should be submerged, I'd refuse to live.

Woman and the Referendum.

There seems to be some misunderstanding in regard to the best position for a woman to take, in opposition to the adoption of woman suffrage. Shall she vote or keep silent? To clear up the matter for our Andover ladies we have obtained from the headquarters of the Anti-Suffrage Association a statement of their position in the matter. They say, in brief, that as an association they advise women not to vote, but to urge men to vote "No," and this certainly seems to be the best position that can be urged upon the women opponents of the question. The few who want suffrage will be quick to avail themselves of even this one chance to exercise its privileges, while the multitude who do not want it can never be brought to oppose it by any union so powerful, as by being united in their own keeping away from the polls, and in their quiet influence over men friends. It seems certainly to be good advice that the association gives, and we look for lots of silence among Andover women, with an equally emphatic "No" among the men.

Editorial Clinders.

The Andover Common Room, mentioned elsewhere, has a "homely" sound, and may it have a "homely" meaning to the young America who shall enjoy it. Its promoters want the boys to be boys and yet desire that they shall grow into men of the right kind. May the scheme be a success and show the floating youth that there are lots better places to loaf in than the streets. The boys will have good times in the "Common Room" if they will meet the men interested anywhere's near halfway, and Andover will be better for it too.

Aren't the Punched boys making just a little too much noise on the streets as they come out at noon each day? It is quite a disturbance to some of the good people along the street.

The Water Commissioners have taken the islands in Haggens Pond, which assures our citizens of no more camping experiences like last summer, to threaten the purity of Andover's water supply.

In our general news column last week appeared an article about Rev. F. H. Smith, the Cambridge minister who is in trouble. In the article, Mr. Smith was spoken of as pastor of a Baptist Church, when he should have been accredited to the Congregational Church.

Andrews Farm Sold to F. J. Hannon.

F. J. Hannon, tailor and farmer. The latter title has been conferred upon him the last week, the result of an important real estate transaction, whereby Mr. Hannon becomes possessor of the M. C. Andrews farm on the North Andover road. The sale was made by Real Estate Agent Rogers. The property contains about thirty-five acres of land and a large and commodious farm barn. It has a frontage of 7,000 feet on the main road. The farm has been kept up in fine condition by Mr. Andrews and is in every way an excellent piece of farm property. Mr. Hannon has not yet definitely decided upon what use he will make of his new property.

HOME MISSIONS.

Prominent Workers Plead Their Cause in the Churches.

Last Sunday was home missionary field day in the congregational churches of the town, and large audiences were present at the different places of worship. The cause was most ably championed and presented in a most interesting way by men who are heart and soul in the work, and who fully understand its needs and possibilities.

Rev. James Doherty was the speaker at the South Church, although Rev. Joshua Coit, who was announced as the speaker, was present and said a few words.

Rev. William G. Pufferfoot, who has spoken in this town several times, and has always been a favorite with Andover church audiences, was at the Free Church and the auditorium was almost completely filled. He was very interesting, especially his experiences in the West.

Secretary Rev. H. D. Ward from Chicago and President Simmons of Fargo College, Dakota, interested the audiences in the morning at the Chapel and West Churches.

The union meeting at the South Church in the evening was the means of bringing out another very large audience, and it is safe to say that the cause of Home Missions was never presented here in a more instructive way or in a manner more inclined to touch the feelings of the audience. The stereoscopic views added greatly to the interest in the service. Rev. Joshua Coit conducted the opening exercises, the hymns sung being thrown upon the screen.

After Rev. Joshua Coit, Rev. Mr. Pufferfoot spoke in his characteristic manner, the humor mingled with his remarks keeping the audience intensely interested. He confined himself to the condition of affairs in the United States. Pictures of churches, old and new, people, localities, etc., were shown and vividly described. Rev. H. D. Ward also spoke interestingly.

It was in all a very successful day for Home Missions, and it is understood that some $500 were collected for the cause.

Three Social Evenings.

Such is the plan in its broadest meaning, that several of Andover's progressive ladies are working up. Not for the few, but for the Andover public at large these evenings are designed, and how well they accomplish their aim in bringing together our Andover people will depend entirely upon the people themselves. They will be held at the November Club House and the program includes an entertainment of some sort to take up a part of each evening. The first night comes Nov. 5, with a Kaffee Klatsch as the attraction. The two other evenings will furnish a dramatic entertainment for one and a not yet decided upon feature for the other, and all three will furnish sociability and means of better acquaintance with one another in just as large a measure as you and you and you may wish to have them.

The price of season tickets has been placed at $1.00, with 50 cents the charge for a single evening. The affair is not designed to make money, but if any balance remains it will be divided between the A. V. I. S. and the Board of Organized Charity.

Police Court.

Judge Poor held a session of Police Court Tuesday afternoon. A man, by the name of Rafferty, charged with assault committed at the John Maddox farm in West Parish, was found guilty and given 60 days in the house of correction. Joe Dalton was also making trouble about the same place and being found guilty on the charge of malicious mischief was also sent up for 60 days.

In the evening Albert Heilman, one of the Phillips Academy police force, appeared to answer to a charge of assault upon John McNally. As he was found to be under 17 years of age and that the case would come under the juvenile law, it was postponed to Thursday evening.

Accordingly, Heilman appeared last evening before the juvenile session of court and pleaded not guilty to the charge of assault on John McNally. It seems from the evidence presented on both sides that McNally went to the Phillips campus last Saturday with the intention of seeing the foot-ball game. Finally, sometime before the game, the defendant approached him and asked for a quarter. Some considerable argument ensued, in which both evidently lost their tempers, and in which McNally used offensive language. Refusing to leave the field or pay the quarter at that time to the defendant, the latter struck McNally on the head with his cane.

Although there was probably some provocation, Judge Poor stated that there was no law to uphold the defendant in committing the assault and therefore found him guilty and imposed a fine of $10, which was paid.

Voters Registered This Week.

The following new voters were registered at the meetings held this week: Ballard Vale, Oct. 23: Mrs. Addie M. Cummings, Mrs. Frances S. Clukey, Mrs. Catherine Clement, Mrs. Frances Marie Evans, Mrs. Mary A. Fessenden, Mrs. Kate P. Goodwin, Mrs. Clara Anna Nason, Mrs. Mae J. Parkhurst, Mrs. Agnes H. Shaw, William A. Blackwood, David F. Barnes.

At Town House, Oct. 21: Fred S. Dodson, James A. Nolan.

The Andover Mothers.

Editor of the Townsman:

May I be allowed to correct your statement in a recent editorial in regard to the adjective "posted"? "One whose aim is to get posted" will fit the case exactly. My own large allowance of ancestors on hand and still increasing, has furnished material for so many sketches such as our revered teacher, Miss Bailey, collected for "the heirs of so rich a legacy of local history and tradition" that it seemed best to put them before the TOWNSMAN's readers before the visitors who will want to know everything, descend upon us next year. There are many who have the legends and family connections handy but who will never care to "rush into print," and these have given me the most sympathetic assistance in "snapping" pedigrees.

While Mr. Lincoln, Mr. Carpenter and Mr. Chickering are doing good work in the "male" lines of the town's history, as is usual with men interested in research, I propose to rescue from oblivion the mothers, grandmothers, with the spinster men, the bachelor-women, and the childless couples who adopted nephews and nieces. I will show where the descendants who appear to have "vanished" really are. Any who has the least fact or clue will be welcomed in and of ferred to this good end.

C. H. A.

A Revolutionary Soldier.

The grave of Mr. Caleb Abbot in the South Church burying ground has been marked. Upon the stone has been added the words, "He was a Revolutionary Soldier" and over the grave has been erected an iron marker, the official memento of the sons of the American Revolution to their worthy warlike sires. Mr. Abbot was born in Andover where he died in 1887, aged 85 years. He joined the first company raised in Andover for the war in the winter of 1776, Benjamin Ames, Captain. He marched with his company towards Lexington on the 19th of April, fought at Bunker Hill, was in 1778 with Montgomery and Arnold in Canada, was early in 1777 at the battles of Trenton and Princeton, was at the terrible winter camp at Valley Forge. In 1778 he found him again enlisting in the company of Captain John Abbot Jr., for a term of three years of the war. This grave is probably the first of the graves of the sons of Andover Revolutionary soldiers, thus marked, in the Old South parish burying ground.

May we not hope that this may prove an incentive to others, descendants of the heroic dead of Andover, to see to it, that the graves of the hundreds of the noble patriots of the Revolution, here resting, may be singularly indicated and honored.

The marking of the grave of Mr. Abbot was done at the instance of his daughter, Mrs. Clarissa Abbot Poor.

Daughters of the Revolution Entertained.

The State Society of the Daughters of the Revolution were royally entertained in Salem, last Saturday, by the North Bridge Chapter of that place and among those in attendance were Miss Giddings and Miss Ellen J. Abbot of this town, who are members of the society. Upon their arrival in Salem, they were escorted to Plummer Hall, where they registered, and were then shown about the city. Saturday was the anniversary of the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown 1781, and it was this event that was being commemorated. A splendid luncheon was served at the summer residence of Mrs. Abner C. Goodell, Jr., at Juniper Point, Miss Sarah Hunt being the entertainer. A stroll about the fine house and grounds revealed many interesting relics, of revolutionary times, belonging to Miss Hunt and her sister Mrs. Goodell. At 5 o'clock there was a meeting at Academy Hall, where singing and interesting patriotic addresses were enjoyed. The interest in Andover in this society will soon result in the formation of a regular chapter.

Andover Common Room.

That is to be the name of a new feature of Andover life, a game and reading room for men, and for boys over fourteen. The rooms which are to be occupied for this purpose are behind Music (Valpey's) Hall. At present they look fit for no club but a policeman's club; but they are being partially renovated, and by Friday, Nov. 1, they will be ready for visitors. Thereafter they will be open on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, from 7 till 9. Beside the ordinary games, the leading weekly illustrated papers and monthly magazines will be found there. Every young man in town is welcome to these rooms. Entrance is free for casual visitors, but regular visitors will be expected to become "sustaining members," on payment of fifty cents for the seven or eight months during which the rooms will remain open. The enterprise is backed financially by the South Church, but church lines will not exist for the rooms.

Correction.

Miss Carter wishes to correct the false report which has been put into circulation, concerning the watch which was stolen from her home a short time ago. The watch has not been found.

Woman Suffrage.

This is a question to be determined not by popular custom, clamor, prejudice, or any bigbear projected from a vivid imagination, but by principles of exact justice and right between one part of the human race and another. When we have fairly settled on the ground of perfect equity and equality, the duties, privileges, and opportunities, that one human being owes to another then we have necessarily decided once and for all time in favor of woman suffrage. It is now a question of sex only because man has made it so in the same way that in the exercise of his assumed power and prerogative, he has made a thousand other unjust laws, but in the light of strict justice between one part of the community and another it is only a question of fair dealing. Why, indeed, should a man vote? And when, dear reader, you are prepared to answer this question intelligently, you may on the same ground find reasons why a woman should possess the same privilege. And why should not a woman vote? Is she not a human being? Has she not a soul, affections, social interests, and civil liabilities like a man? Has she not virtue and intelligence, can't she read and write? This is all that is required of men. Does not she own property and pay taxes? Is she not amenable to all laws, liable to be sued in courts and tried by juries? Why under the sun then should she not vote, and have some voice in making these laws, in selecting those who shall execute them, and in deciding the character of government into whose hands she commits, in a large measure, her life, property, social, and temporal interests? And is it not rather small business for a parcel of men to tax a woman's property without giving her the opportunity of saying how the money shall be used? The payment of taxes and representation is one of the fundamental principles of a republican form of government. It was for this privilege that our fathers fought, and with the aid of their wives and daughters gained the victory, but as inconsistent as it may seem, only to be enjoyed by one half the community.

Then the idea that because women are given the opportunity to vote, is imposing upon them a burden, is simply absurd. There is no compulsion at all about the matter. Even after a woman has registered and is qualified to vote, she can go to the polls or stay at home just as she chooses. In this regard she is placed on the same footing with a man. Why then talk about it as a "burden" forced upon her? A woman who deems it a right and a privilege to vote would not certainly consider it a "burden" to do so.

But then we are told that women do not wish to vote. Why then in the name of reason, are all these fears—opposition to their having the privilege? One may be very sure that if they do not wish to vote they won't vote. And therefore all this dread about the wheels of government stopping or going to pieces in case the right is granted, may be dismissed. We do not see why our anti-woman suffrage friends should get excited or shed tears over something which they believe will never happen. It is our opinion, however, that there are women in every town and city in our state who for many reasons would like to vote. They are deeply interested in certain moral and social questions, among the most prominent is, perhaps, the question of temperance. They believe that they have the right to say whether the dramshop shall exist in their neighborhood to destroy the bodies, characters, and souls of their husbands, brothers and boys. And who, indeed, has a greater interest in this question than thousands of poor, suffering and helpless women, whose hearts are made wretched and whose homes are broken by this accursed business? If there are any men who are so very anxious to relieve women from "burdens," here is a chance to show their sincerity by giving them the opportunity by voting against the saloon, thus removing from the lives and hearts of these women one of the saddest "burdens" which many of them are called to bear. Who ever knew of a rum seller in favor of woman suffrage?

Again, we are told that our cities and towns are great business corporations and that women are not sufficiently experienced in these matters to vote intelligently. Well, if they are not, whose fault is it? Place them in a position where their attention will be called to such subjects and interests as usually come up in a town meeting, and who doubts their ability to learn. It does not require a large amount of experience or education to vote intelligently for upright and capable town officers, schools, street lighting, sewerage, or even on that great and all-absorbing question, "good roads." And on matters pertaining to the general government, they are just as well qualified to vote intelligently as one half of the men who do vote. If they are not they are to be pitied. What do the tens of the male voters know about questions of tariff, finance, silver, etc., questions on which the highest men in our country of both parties are hopelessly divided. And it comes with very ill grace for men to talk about intelligent voters when they permit the large and scum of the old world, ignorant of our laws, institutions, language and needs, to participate in our elections in a short time after they strike our shores. Not a whisper is heard against this class of voters. But a class of persons who will compare in refinement, intelligence, and patriotism with the men, who are the life and strength of our churches, the leaders in all charitable works, the best part, indeed, of creation, cannot vote simply because they are women. Brother voters, let us simply be just. There is no danger of a great rush of women voters to our town meetings. Many do not care to vote, there are some who do. Give them the opportunity. In many states they have this privilege and no harm has come from its exercise. Not England, nor far off New Zealand, nor the New Western states of our own country, put old Massachusetts nor herself to shame. What is morally right is always wise, useful, and beneficial.

AT A TENEMENT WINDOW.

Sometimes my needle stops with half drawn thread. (Not often, though. Each moment's waste means bread. And missing stitches leave the little mouths unroofed.) I look down on the dirty court below. A tuft of grass is all it has to show. A broken pump where tiny children go. Above there shines a bit of sky so small That it might be a passing bird's wing. One tree leans up against the high brick wall. And there the sparrows twitter of the spring Until they waken in my heart a cry Of hunger that no bread can satisfy.

Always before when May time took her way Across the fields I followed close. Today I can but dream of all her bright array. My work drops down. Across the sill I lean And long with bitter longing for unseen Rain-freshened paths where budding woods grow green.

The water trickles from the pump below Upon the stones. With eyes half shut I hear It falling in a pool where rushes grow And feel a cooling presence drawing near. And now the sparrows chirp again. No, hark! A singing as of some far meadow lark. It is the same old miracle applied Unto myself, that on the mountain side The few small leaves and fishes multiplied. Behold how strange and sweet the mystery! The birds, the broken pump, the garbled tree Have brought the fullness of the spring to me. For in the leaves that rustle by the wall All forests find a tongue. And so that green Car with its struggling tuft of green recall Wide bloom filled meadows where the cattle roam.

How I can be but dimly I divine These crumbs, God gives, make the whole loaf mine.

HER ALARM CLOCK.

And Why She Had Good Reason For Being Informed Against It.

A suburban woman not long since purchased an alarm clock. It was a fat nickel plated little affair with the customary gong atop. The woman got the clock because she felt an overwhelming desire to play the role of the early bird. That night, therefore, she set the time-piece according to the specified directions. But for some reason or other the clock failed to go off. The woman gave it a second trial. Again it played her false. She took it to the suburban jeweler. He said the clock was outrageously out of order, hinted darkly at the dishonesty of any individual who would palm off such an article as perfect goods and prescribed a course of treatment which he would be gracious enough to administer for the sum of 75 cents. The clock's original cost had been $1.50.

The night that it came back from the suburban jeweler the woman wound it up with a feeling of unassailable security. This time the role of the early bird would be hers for certain. The next morning, however, it failed to go off, just as before. The woman took it back to the suburban jeweler, who received it with an "I told you that clock was terribly out of order." Encore, 75 cents. Time passed, the clock, like the cat in the canticle, "came back," and the woman woke up (some hours later than she had intended) only to find that it hadn't "gone off" again. She now took the troublesome timepiece to the city jeweler from whom she had first purchased it. He declared the clock to have been all right until "ruined" by the suburban jeweler, but consented to repair it—also to charge $1 for so doing. The woman then bore it home in triumph.

Next morning, though, the same old drama was enacted, and the woman was once more unable to assume the role of the early bird. Had she been a man she might have sworn. As it was, she confided her woes to the breakfast table. "Why, that clock's been going off all the time," observed the woman who occupied the neighboring room to the clock owner. "It's wicked me up every morning regularly. The trouble is it hasn't waked you."

Whereupon the woman felt more incensed against the clock than ever. To think of its having so little discrimination and discretion as to wake up the wrong person!—New York Sun.

Queer Facts About Air.

The celebrated chemist of the sixteenth century who argued that it would be impossible for us to live on the earth's surface if the atmosphere should suddenly increase to twice its present thickness could not have been far wrong, after all—that is, if the experiments of Dr. Arnott are to be taken as conclusive. In his observations on atmospheric pressure at the bottoms of the deep mining shafts of Europe, Professor Arnott has found that the change between the readings of a barometer at the bottom of a 4,000 foot shaft and one at the surface is great enough to warrant him in making the statement that air at the bottom of a shaft 30 miles deep would be as dense as water. Figuring on the same ratio, he finds that if a hole could be sunk 40 miles into the bowels of the earth the density of the air at the bottom would be as great as that of quicksilver.—St. Louis Republic.

Women on the Bicycle.

What a pretty thing a woman on a bicycle is! Her pose is good. She sits erect and rides easily, gracefully. Most men stoop while riding. Women sit erect. Men always seem to be on business bent and in a hurry. Women appear to ride for pleasure and in no hurry. Men have the bicycle face, arising, it is said, from the care they have to bestow to avoid accident. Women have the air of easy indifference, unconsciousness of risk. They ride as the true goddess walked.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

THE SOCIABLE GAME.

BOSTON SOCIETY'S RADICAL INNOVATIONS AT POKER.

Decks of Sixty Cards and "Ringdoodle" Among the New Features—Sympathy For Losers and Luncheon With "A Two Nip" For All—The Little Kitty.

Could the late Minister Schenck, who gave to the world during his diplomatic life a treatise on the fascinating American game, attend a modern poker party he would certainly declare that the world has moved backward, in one respect at least.

Very few people outside certain circles of the Back Bay have any conception of the extent to which poker playing is carried in that section. The whole locality is divided into "sets," and it is customary for each one to hold a session at his or her house nearly every night in the week.

The usual hour for beginning play is 8 o'clock, and it is customary for the ladies to dress for the occasion, while the gentlemen not infrequently array themselves in full evening costume.

The standard limit is 10 cents, one reason for making it so small being that the conscientious shall not feel that they are gambling. It is frequently remarked by this one and that one that they have not come out for the purpose of making anything—only to have a social time. This statement appears somewhat incongruous when placed side by side with the look of satisfaction that is noticeable when a good sized jackpot is taken in.

Another feature of society poker is the great amount of sympathy expressed for the players when the cards are running badly and they have been called upon to interview the bank for the fifth or sixth time. The heaviest dealers in sympathy are those who have the largest stack of chips before them. It does not cost anything, and it is believed by the ones who peddle it out that it will impress the others with a belief that they are real generous. But a careful observer will notice as the game progresses that the unlucky one is always raised by those who believe they have the best hands, notwithstanding the size of their stacks.

This is called poker table sympathy and is as shallow and meaningless as much of the talk heard among society people.

Generally there are three hours of play, after which the hostess asks her guests to a light repast, consisting of sardines, crackers, cheese and sweetmeats. Bottled beer is the favorite beverage, but there are instances on record where something stronger has been indulged in. A great many society people of both sexes drink rum punch, lemonade dashed with whisky and plain gin.

The usual time devoted to refreshments is 15 minutes, as all are anxious to get at the cards again.

Now the peculiar features of society poker, which are contrary to the "formula" presented by the lamented Schenck, are novel and numerous, and while they are readily accepted by nine-tenths of those who play just for the fun of the thing, yet the other tenth is unalterably opposed to them, but, acting in accordance with the principle that the majority should rule, all efforts to have the game rid of them have been abortive.

The most pain that the small minority experiences in playing the evolved game is when the 60 card decks are brought in. It frequently happens that seven and eight players are present at a sitting, and when everybody "stays" the cards fall short, which necessitates gathering up the "dead wood" and filling out the hands from it. There is a well grounded superstition that these discarded have been robbed of everything of value, and that to draw from them is equivalent to throwing the chips into a red-hot stove. To in a measure meet these exigencies 11 and 13 spot cards have been added, making the pack consist of 60 cards instead of 52. Those who have been accustomed to play at the clubs, where the game still retains all its Schenckian purity, have a chill when they find these obtrusive cards are to confront them.

Another innovation is the "ringdoodle." Where the word originated is a mystery fully as deep as the practice it designates. A ringdoodle is declared when a hand has been called and fours are shown. Then follows a round of jack pots, the holder of the winning hand starting them. Blue chips are put up to correspond with the number of players. Of course this makes a heavy drain on the stacks which have been lowered through the evening by ill luck, and if the owner of one of these happens to be an opponent of the ringdoodle, he goes off on a long dissertation on how the game was once played. Of course a round of jack pots would be equivalent to a ringdoodle, but it comes easier to some players to pay on the installment plan.

It has now become the custom to make a discount of one red chip for every jack pot. Although this is a pretty heavy rake off, yet it all comes back to the players just before the wind up for the evening. When time has crept on toward midnight, the keeper of the kitty announces that a round of consolation jacks will be played. The chips are divided into a number of piles corresponding with the number of players, and the extras are placed in the center of the table with the individual contributions. When society plays poker, there is always a big supply of cards on hand. If luck runs badly for a player a new pack is demanded, but it is rarely fortune changes her plans. She names the unfortunate one before the game starts, and no form of device will bring about an alteration in her programme.—Boston Herald.

A strenuous soul hates cheap success. It is the ardor of the assailant that makes the vigor of the defendant.—Emerson.

SUFFRAGE FOR WOMEN

Is a Certainty if they Ever Make a Demand For It.

Francis Parkman Says the Majority Are Averse to It.

Relative Position of the Sexes Has Always Remained the Same.

Nothing is more certain than that women will have the suffrage if they ever want it; for when they want it men will give it to them regardless of consequences. A more than readiness on the part of men to conform to the wishes of the other sex is a national trait in America, though whether it would survive the advent of the female politician is matter for reflection. We venture to remind those who demand women suffrage as a right that, even if it were so, the great majority of intelligent women could judge for themselves whether to exercise it better than the few who assume to teach them their duty.

The agitators know well that, in spite of their persistent importunity, the majority of women are averse to the suffrage. A small number of women have spent their time for several decades in ceaseless demands for suffrage, but they have lost their best argument in failing to show that they are prepared to use the franchise when they have got it. A single sound and useful contribution to one side or the other of any question of current politics—the tariff, specie payments, the silver bill, civil service reform, railroad monopoly, capital and labor, or a half score of other matters—would have done more for their cause than years of empty agitation.

Permanence of the Relation of the Sexes.

The agitators say that no reason can be given why women should not take a direct part in politics, except that they have never done so. There are other reasons, and strong ones, in abundance. But this particular one is nevertheless good. All usages, laws and institutions have risen and perished, and risen and perished again. Their history is the history of mutability itself. But, from the earliest records of mankind down to this moment, in every race and every form or degree of civilization or barbarism, the relative position of the sexes has been essentially the same, with exceptions so feeble, rare and transient that they only prove the rule. Such permanence in the foundation of society, while all that rests upon it has passed from change to change, is proof in itself that this foundation lies deep in the essential nature of things. It is idle to prate of the old time that has passed away and the new time that is coming. The "new time" can no more stir the basis of human nature than it can stop the movement of the earth.

The cause of this permanence is obvious. Women have great special tasks assigned them in the work of life, and men have not. To these tasks their whole nature, moral and physical, is adjusted. There is scarcely a distinctive quality of women that has not a direct or indirect bearing upon them. Everything else in their existence is subordinated to the indispensable functions of continuing and rearing the human race; and, during the best years of life, this work, fully discharged, leaves little room for any other. Rightly considered, it is a work no less dignified than essential. It is the root and stem of national existence, while the occupations of men are but the leaves and branches. On women of the intelligence and integrity of classic days depends the future of the nation. If they are sound in body and mind, impart this soundness to a numerous offspring and rear them to a sense of responsibility and duty, there are no national evils that we cannot overcome. If they fail to do this, their part, then the making of the course and unintelligent, always of rapid increase, will overwhelm us and our institutions.—Francis Parkman.

Grounds of Remonstrance.

The following protest, addressed by women of New York to the constitutional convention of that state, expresses briefly and forcibly some of the reasons which lead the great majority of American women to oppose to having the great responsibilities of the nation thrust upon them:

We, American women, citizens of the state of New York, protest against the proposal to impose the obligation of suffrage upon the women of this state, for the following, among other reasons:

First—Because suffrage is to be regarded not as a privilege to be enjoyed, but as a duty to be performed.

Second—Because hitherto the women of this state have enjoyed exemption from this burdensome duty, and no adequate reason has been assigned for depriving them of this immunity.

Third—Because conferring suffrage upon the women who claim it would impose suffrage upon the many women who neither desire it as a privilege nor regard it as their duty.

Fourth—Because the need of America is not an increased quantity, but an improved quality of the vote, and there is no adequate reason to believe that women's suffrage by doubling the vote will improve its quality.

Fifth—Because the household, not the individual, is the unit of the state, and the vast majority of women are represented by household suffrage.

Sixth—Because the women not so represented suffer no practical injustice which giving the suffrage will remedy.

Seventh—Because equality in character does not imply similarity in function, and the duties and life of men and women are divinely ordered to be different in the state as in the home.

Eighth—Because the energies of women are engrossed by the present duties and interests, from which men cannot relieve them, and it is better for the community that they devote their energies to the more efficient performance of their present work than to divert them to new fields of activity.

Ninth—Because political equality will deprive women of special privileges hitherto accorded to her by law.

Tenth—Because suffrage logically involves the holding of public office, and office holding is inconsistent with the duties of most women.

May Will Be Blanked.

BOSTON, Oct. 24.—The Australian ballot law of 1903 was declared to be constitutional in a decision of a full bench of the superior court returned yesterday. The court says that the so-called Australian ballot provides that the voter may vote for himself, but that he is prohibited from writing his name on the ballot, in which he may write or insert in any other manner the names of such persons.

The guests included many young people who remembered their friend pleasantly with appropriate gifts after which a nice collation was served and the hours enjoyed in a social manner.

Obituary.

MRS. REBECCA FOSTER FARNUM.

Monday evening about half past six o'clock, the thread of life parted, and Mrs. Jacob Farnum, our oldest resident, in all gentleness and peace entered upon her final rest. She was the daughter of Nathan and Susanna (Barker) Foster and a native of Iowa and commenced life's journey Aug. 9, 1804. Her birthplace and home until after her wedding, was the dwelling nearly opposite the Orrin Foster residence, in Kimball district, now used as a store-house. April 27, 1829 she became the wife of Mr. Jacob Farnum and with him removed to the homestead in the Farnum district where they continued to share life together until his decease in January 1890, having observed their golden wedding nearly 14 years previous.

Freighted with the burdens of more than ninety and one years, it would be very unusual if either the physical or mental faculties were unimpaired, and although in a degree, during the last three years the infirmities of age have been gradually gaining the ascendancy, yet through the tender and kind ministrations of reverent sons and daughters unto whom she used to minister, the pathway from life's summit toward its sunset has been made peaceful, and the journey made to seem less wearisome by the loving care bestowed.

In the days of activity, Mrs. Farnum is remembered as a very kind, considerate, motherly woman, of a singularly sweet disposition, neighborly, and in manner very social and entertaining. Her influence in the home gave character to the children who have become upright and valued citizens in this or other communities in which they dwell.

The dwelling in which Mrs. Farnum passed so many years of her life and in which she died was the homestead and was established in 1787.

Farnum is a name quite prominently identified with the town history and in fact with national history, the grandfather, Deacon Benjamin Farnum, was a captain who assisted bravely at Bunker Hill, and during an engagement received wounds which continued to trouble and annoy him through life. He died at the now ancient dwelling, his last hours soothed and comforted by his grand-daughter.

Deceased is survived by the following children; Mrs. William Stuart Jenkins of Andover, Mr. Jacob L. Farnum, Mrs. George A. Abbott, Mrs. Benjamin Holt Farnum, Mrs. Abijah P. Fuller of town, and Mrs. Leonard A. Burnham of Gloucester.

Funeral services were held at the late home yesterday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, Rev. W. H. Ryder of the Universalist Church, Gloucester, officiating. The body was interred in the family lot in Ridgewood cemetery. Messrs. W. S. Jenkins, Jacob L. Farnum, Benjamin H. Farnum, George A. Abbott, Leonard A. Burnham and Benjamin W. Farnum served as bearers.

GEORGE WOODHOUSE.

After an illness of about seven weeks, of causes attendant upon age, Mr. George Woodhouse died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Samuel Carter, on Water Street, Saturday evening about 6 o'clock.

Deceased was a native of England and followed the trade of spinning and during his residence of 26 years in the town has, a greater part of the time, been an employee in the Sutton Mill. His age was 73 years. Three children survive him, Mr. James Woodhouse of Main St., Mrs. Isaac Matava of Hampstead, N. H., Mrs. Samuel Carter of town.

Funeral services by Rev. E. S. Thomas were held Monday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, at the late home, and the interment was in Ridgewood cemetery.

JOHN CLARK FISH.

Mr. John C. Fish died very suddenly at his home near Andover Street, Monday morning about twenty minutes past seven o'clock, of heart disease. He had just returned from the Nutting residence having, as usual, completed the morning chores and sat waiting for the breakfast call when his daughter observed a strange inclination of his head and in a moment life had fled, the unexpected departure being a severe shock to the family. Mr. Fish was the third son of Ebenezer and Abigail (Angier) Fish, and was born in Atkinson N. H. 78 years ago, but years ago removed to this town and with his parents occupied the Becker house in the Kimball District.

Nov. 17, 1853, he married Miss Mary J. Elliot of Topsfield, who survives him and with whom he lived for nearly 42 years in the house which they first occupied after marriage. Ten children, all of whom are living, were born to them, the youngest being 20 years of age. Two brothers, Augustus Fish of Danvers, George Fish of Haverhill, and two sisters, Mrs. Martha Perley of Bradford and Mrs.

Charlotte Platt of Haverhill. Funeral services were held at the house Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. E. S. Thomas officiating.

Numerous floral tributes which surrounded the casket testified to the love of kindred and esteem of friends. The body was committed to a grave in Ridgewood Cemetery, Rev. Mr. Thomas conducting the service. The bearers were Messrs. Chas. F. Johnson, Capt. Walter Wild, Wm. S. Roundy, Frederic P. Hanford.

Farnham School.

There are some among the older people in town who recollect happy scenes and incidents in connection with their youthful days spent in the old Farnham school-house, where they were first inspired to drink at the fountain of knowledge, and having tasted, to continue the pursuit until in later days, amid other scenes of life, came the opportunity for the application of the instruction which they had received. To these, as well as those who now tread the pathway of learning at the school, and our townspeople generally, it will be a pleasure to read the following graceful lines dedicated to this district school and recited on the occasion, the recent flag-raising, Oct. 11, 1895, by Miss Emily F. Carleton, for many years a teacher in the public schools of this town and later of Lawrence:

What says our flag as high it floats?
What meaning have its stars?
What message comes from field of blue—
From white and crimson bars?
A thing of life and soul it seems,
Unfurled to God's free air,
Its bars are songs, its stars are smiles,
Its upward look is prayer.

From out the archives of the Past
Take Time's worn volume down;
Trace there the lineage and the birth
Our country's flag shall own.

We read of warfare, conquest, spoil;
Of hardship, death and woe,
As heroes brave explored the wilds,
Or fought with deadly foe.

We see our nation, step by step,
Led onward in its way;
We find our country's honor dear—
A boon to keep for aye.

This record old, who runs may read—
"E Pluribus Unum," our fame!
Our freedom is birthright, but sacred is law,
And holy is Liberty's name.

From garnered lore of brave exploit
Our flags traditions come;
Guarding the early settlement,
Behold its shape and form.

It led the young colonial force
Through Revolution's strife;
Facing into ranks, warm and bright,
Its independent life.

Our colors drop and shroud their staff,
Perchance with sorrow bowed,
At memory of War's heroic strife
And slavery's awful cloud.

A shudder thrills their every fold
As wrong and jealous hate,
Still lurking in the hearts of men,
Invoke disastrous fate.

But Faith and Hope stand counselors,
And bid them "Forward turn!"
Look up and out, with broader view
Extend Right Liberty's arm.

Though scarred and torn and trampled oft,
Our flag renews its grace,
For Freedom's spirit marches on—
Its rights it never will concede.

With reverence, to these stars and stripes
Our hearts all tribute bring;
Their glories fair, their honors famed,
With hearty cheer we'll sing.

Each fold and wave, hallow-sung, proclaims
Our nation's sacred cause;
These colors fair—red, white and blue—
Illume our nation's laws.

One moment, give your fancy rein:
Build up a sacred shrine,
Hail there the goddess, Liberty,
For her fair garlands twine.

These colors wait an incense flame,
Or blaze with sacred light;
Our Nation bows before the shrine
For sacrificial rite.

Mid darkness gloom of cloud and smoke,
With tempest shock and gust,
The heart of Liberty is strong;
For offering meet and just!

Transform the scene with rain of tears,
Bid flowers deck earth's fresh sod:
A solemn nation freely vows
To country, home and God!

Fair Ensign! Keep your watch and ward
O'er school, and home and farm;
Bid valley, hill and hills rejoice,
In Freedom's peace and calm.

A sacred trust, dear boys and girls,
Accept your banner fair;
Guard well its honor and its fame
With manly virtues rare.

Yon playground is your field of life
Where sport shall try the nerve,
And character stand weak or staunch,
While passions rule or serve.

Keep passion calm, let reason guide;
Brave out Misfortune's frown;
Learn to respect your neighbor's rights
While holding fast your own.

This schoolroom holds your stars of hope,
Win here your colors fair;
In Wisdom's ways with freedom walk,
Here, bravely do your part.

Be faithful, cheerful at your work;
Be true of heart and thought;
Obey the law within the soul—
Heed Duty's stern, "I ought!"

Fair symbol mark the banner prove,
In red and white and blue,
Of order, peace and union strong—
Your standard, bright and true.

God bless our flag! On all our hearts
Be meaning grand impress!
God help us all to serve the right!
Heaven's peace our souls possess!
